Guide to safe lifting factors

Correct sling selection is an important consideration when planning your lift. The working load limit (WLL) will change depending on the lifting mode you use, whether it be;

- Straight lift
- Choke hitch
- Basket lift

Use the factor table on the right to determine the correct sling selection.

Remember: Lifting should not be carried out by anyone who is not suitably qualified and is familiar with the lifting techniques and regulations surrounding a lift. This is a guide only.

Round lifting slings

Low weight, flexible and easy to handle - our range of round slings carry a working load limit marking in addition to colour coding. Made from 100% polyester, they feature a continuous core and soft cover to reduce damage to delicate surfaces during lifting

Testing & compliancy

All of our lifting slings are manufactured to give a safety factor of 7:1 and each sling is individually numbered for traceability.

As part of our commitment to safety, all slings are supplied with a Certificate of Conformity and they comply with BS EN 1492:200, the United Kingdom & European lifting sling standard. All slings supplied by Freight Products are CE marked.

Each ticket attached to your sling also indicates the date of manufacture and other important material information.
