Licence-Free PMR446 Radios Price List

“Licence-free” walkie-talkies conform to the UK and EU standard (called “PMR446”) for handheld radios that can be bought and used for any purpose within the EU member states. The PMR446 standard specifies that this type of radio can have a maximum power output of 0.5 watts, and must use 8 channels around 446MHz in the UHF band. The low power means a shorter range than is possible with the more powerful radios that require a licence.

PMR446 radios have enough power and range to cover maybe a mile in open country, or a few hundred metres inside or amongst buildings – easily enough for use around most workplaces for example.
